

CIVIC CENTRE SCHEME STILL QUITE ALIVE

Great Company, to allow the city to acquire stock in that concern, all negotiations are broken off. No discussions resulted from this announcement. Mr. Grayton was asked to add to the point. He said "we try to inform you that we hereby withdraw our consideration of the proposal by the city to our company re the purchase of stock in the Hull Gravel Company, and that we do not consider it by the city." That was all, but it was quite enough to shove the gravel company right out of town.

Lumber Company Concerned.

The Rendall-Mackay-Mitchell Lumber Company, which had been mentioned in a report from a special committee of the council for infractions of the building by-laws, was also mentioned in regard to the widening of Education street. It appears that this company is in financial trouble and has agreed to contribute to the by-laws, and is also piling it too near street. The report of the committee which was adopted.

The first impression that we received was that the fragrant contravention was the result of a hasty by-law, regarding piling number.

"After having carefully considered all the facts, we find that in view of the arbitration award, we cannot agree as to either the method or manner in which the by-laws should be brought in such an award, and we would respectfully ask that the commissioners be allowed to consider this matter before the city selector at as early date as possible and find out whether it would be expedient or possible to have this award set aside."

"Our inquiry we find that our claims against the lumber company in respect of the setting of the arbitration board, and as he had important evidence to submit, we will let him have his day, and how they arrived at a fair decision."

"We find on the explanation of Mr. Rendall, Mr. Mackay and Mr. Mitchell that the Rendall-Mackay-Mitchell Company were fully notified that their building was erected, before that building was erected."

Others Were Prejudiced.

"We also find that several of the persons who were not in a position to accept permits to erect buildings except on the new street line, and who did not wish that the city should interfere with them, brought up this matter with the building inspector and ascertained how the building lines were to be set out, and a committee of the city came to be erected on the old street line after it had been decided to widen the street."

"Your committee further recommends that in all its representations to the city, where the city is concerned, the city be represented by their claims and damage agent, and other officials who are in a position to represent it, necessary to properly safeguard its city's interest."

Car Extensions.

The requested opinion from City Selector Town was read in which it was stated that the city could not accept the car extensions because the city is within its legal rights in accepting new street railway extensions. Mr. Dowson said that the car extensions might be classed as gifts if the city accepted them.

As application from the Ruthman Glass Company was made to the city for car extensions, the city committee put in as local improvements, a gift extension amounts to practically the same thing."

"Is it the intention of the city to do this work as a local improvement?" asked Mr. Dowson.

"It isn't our intention to do anything but it isn't our intention to do anything but it is our intention to do something," replied Mayor Shor. "We have no objection to the car extensions, or having a railway extension put in as local improvements, a gift extension amounts to practically the same thing."

Alerman Livingston then argued Alberta's case, and said that the condition, that he and other members of the council and the commission board would not be bound by any agreement, an injunction to prevent the city from entering into contracts to accept and operate the railroads, was not valid. He did not think the City Selector had taken the right view of the matter, as part was an asset, and part was a liability. Further, Livingston thought that the council had no right to override the wishes of the city engineer and street railway superintendent. The council could lay down a street railway, but it could not, under the charter, dictate every detail of administration, as far as what the commissioners were for.

This whole question will be argued again, and the city will be bound by the decision of this court," concluded Alerman Livingston.

I Am Opposed to "Gits."

"And I am afraid Alerman Livingston morally and financially in his effort to get this injunction failed. Alerman Livingston was present when the council accepted the gift extension. Mr. Driscoll placed himself in a difficult position, as he had to say to such action. He thought the only fair way would be to take a plebiscite vote on the question."

"Don't let the city go into these real estate豪華的 housing schemes," he concluded.

The council received notice from the property owners behind the office to build a street railway, that they wanted to have along Alberta Avenue to Twenty-fourth Street, and that they were offering their offer, in view of the fact that Alberta Avenue was to be paved next year.

Mr. Dowson advised that the city

MISS JOSE KIRKPATRICK, pianist of the Misses Woodrow Wilson, standard-bearer of the Canadian women's suffrage cause, is to have the first big wedding reception ever given in Edmonton. Miss Kirkpatrick, who is maid of honor, who was a bridesmaid in the marriage of Princess Louise, Marchioness of Lorne, and Prince Arthur, Duke of Connaught, will be married to Mr. George B. Huntington, a young lawyer, at the United States Embassy, May 10. The bride is a Canadian by birth, educated in the United States, where she has been working for the past year.

other things in describing the wedding:

The rooms of the Misses Wilson home were prettily decorated for the occasion with a profusion of daffodils and tulips in the general scheme being yellow and green through. A picture was arranged in one corner of the parlor, with the bridal couple seated. It was of white daffodils, with a spray of a shower of daffodils and tulips. Canaries were used.

The room was of white chintz with pearl and lace. She carried lilies of the valley and roses, which were attended by her sister, Miss Nell Marion, as maid of honor, who wore a white crepe dress. The bride, Marjorie Macneill, mother of the bride, acted as matron.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark, an aunt of the bride, played Lothringen's Wedding March. NEWSBOYS AS GUESTS.

One hundred and fifty boys from the local newspapers at the opening of the Lyceum Theatre at the production of "Aida, the Singing Girl," Thursday night, March 29, were invited to a section of the seats for the little news vendors, who are the guides of the news papers every year. As the play deals with the varying fortunes of a girl of fifteen years old, the boys, who are seen on the streets of a big city, it is particularly appropriate for the young newsies to sit near the living of their "pin money" on the affairs of Edmonton.

To Leave Naples April 1.

Edmonton April 1.—The lady of the late Mr. Pierpoint Morgan, after it had been established and discussed, was to leave Naples in a sailing ship with white broads. This was placed in a leather casket and finally in the safe of the Bank of Montreal. The Morgan's real holdings were comparatively small. By far the greater portion of his wealth was invested in equities, although it is conceded that the son, J. P. Morgan, will doubtless inherit a large share of his father's fortune.

The former quiet philanthropist, who was popularly known as the "quiet Morgan," was the man who founded the Episcopal church and perhaps Yale and Harvard universities would come into consideration. His general plan was thought, would be announced some time later, either in New York or London.

The United States Ambassador has been in touch with the British embassy in pursuance of instructions received from Secretary of State.

No definite arrangements have yet been made for the transportation of the body to America, but it is understood that the body will be taken to the port of Naples and the ditty box containing the casket will be sent to the port of the Koening Albert, leaving Naples on April 11.

Mr. Morgan's last resting place probably will be in the mausoleum in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Brooklyn, Conn., which had erected years ago in memory of his father and his mother.

The body of Mr. Morgan, which had been buried in the cathedral of St. John and Divine, will be interred in the crypt of the cathedral of St. John and Divine, toward the end of April.

Will be Flying Across Atlantic In a Day Within Next Ten Years

Count De Lambert Says There Are Only Two Difficulties to Overcome in Using Hydro-Aeroplane for This Purpose—One of These is Discovery of Substitute for Petrol.

London, April 1.—In connection with the offer of Lord Northcliffe, in the British Mail, of a prize of $40,000 to the first man who can fly across the Atlantic in a hydro-aeroplane, he can fly between any point in the United States, Canada or Great Britain, and any point in Great Britain, and Ireland, the Mail pointed out interestingly that Count de Lambert, who says that within ten years the Atlantic will be crossed in a day, has been flying since sunrise and sunset on a summer's day. He is the inventor of the hydro-aeroplane which requires less than a 100-pound thrust; and no fuel when sailing.

Two Great Difficulties.

When he was asked what were the chief difficulties of a trans-Atlantic flight, he said:

"The two great difficulties will be to keep one's courage, one is loss of sight of land, and the other is the wind, and to avoid being smashed up by the waves when one alights to replenish his tank. The question of the wind is what is that you may keep your course by the compass, and yet all the while, without knowing it, may be drifting. It is almost impossible to know if driving the machine may be able to drift for a week, say, in case, the engine fails. As far as I am told, no machine has ever gone without stopping on route."

CHALLENGE OF Exchequer Lloyd-Gregor Giving Evidence Before Marion Committee, Marks Strong Statements.

London, April 1.—Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George giving evidence before the Marion Committee, marks strong differences.

"One would suppose," he said, "that the best way to do in us at times as it is sometimes done with a fourteen-cylinder motor. It will not be surprising if the minister is not driven to lie down and rest. The hydro-aeroplane is the machine of the future for crossing the water."
